

This year, the Frankfurt Book Fair will be online. The Institute for Literary Translation is organizing and coordinating Russia's participation in the Fair.

Welcome to Russia's page on the Frankfurt Book Fair!

You are invited to embark on a voyage into the world of Russian publishers and Russian literature.

Here you can listen to writers' lectures about contemporary literature, the works of their colleagues, and their own new books.

You'll become acquainted with major book awards and new translations of Russian writers and get a chance to express your opinion.

You'll take part in publisher presentations, get to know Russian children's literature and the best Russian book illustrators, and see the preparations for the 37th IBBY World Congress that shall be held in Moscow in 2021.

And you'll take a virtual tour of the Moscow International Book Fair (MIBF).

We'll acquaint you with the best Russian and German translators, propose several round tables about translation, and invite everyone to the International Translators' Congress in Russia.

The current pandemic won't be overlooked, either: you'll watch an international online conference held during the MIBF in Moscow, get acquainted with the Russo-French project "The Writer and the Pandemic," and find out which 19th-century Russian novel was the first Russian novel about self-isolation.

Embark on a trip through our hyperlinks that will bring you many interesting discoveries!
